

Our Studio

Studio Arts

Our New Home a beautiful 3-story A-frame (circa 1968) formerly housed a delicious Whataburger Restaurant. In the early 2000's our famous tepee/ship/pyramid housed a neighborhood church. Our new pre-school room is located right where the altar used to be...close to the drive-thru window now filled with art supplies. No fries, but plenty of paint brushes.

Jessica Stewart designed the building's current incarnation, which earned her D-Magazine's "best burger joint renovation" in 2006. She currently teaches an architecture class with us. If your kids would like to learn how to win professional awards one day, give her class a try.

Our property is also cited in the definitive book on the A-Frame! It is called, oddly enough, The A-frame.

We miss our favorite old model, the Lakewood Theatre, but we are pleased to have met this fantastic new landscape - the Studio Arts. Enjoy the stunning banks of natural light and art student-friendly classrooms. We have great views of clouds, trees, and downtown Dallas. We designed it to be your dream studio. We still hold Lakewood Arts Academy deep in our hearts - that will never change. We've simply changed our name to honor our new, retro modern home. We welcome our old friends and our lovely new neighbors. We thank you all for the warm reception!

Art Anyone?

{mosloadposition user9}